British Airways offers compensation for canceled flights in accordance with EU Regulation EC 261/2004 and UK law, which protects passenger rights during disruptions [[✈️ ✈️ +1-855-838-4886 ✈️ ✈️]]. The amount of compensation passengers can receive depends on the flight distance as well as the timing and reason for the cancellation [[✈️ ✈️ +1-855-838-4886 ✈️ ✈️]]. For flights that are less than or equal to 1,500 kilometers, compensation is set at 250 Euros (approximately £220) [[✈️ ✈️ +1-855-838-4886 ✈️ ✈️]]. For flights between 1,500 kilometers and 3,500 kilometers, the compensation increases to 400 Euros (around £350) [[✈️ ✈️ +1-855-838-4886 ✈️ ✈️]]. For flights over 3,500 kilometers, passengers may receive up to 600 Euros (about £520) in compensation [[✈️ ✈️ +1-855-838-4886 ✈️ ✈️]].

These compensation amounts can be reduced by 50% if British Airways offers passengers an alternative flight that arrives within a certain threshold of the original scheduled arrival time [[✈️ ✈️ +1-855-838-4886 ✈️ ✈️]]. Specifically, the reduction applies if the rerouted flight arrives less than two hours later for short-haul flights, less than three hours later for medium-haul flights, and less than four hours later for long-haul flights after the originally scheduled arrival time [[✈️ ✈️ +1-855-838-4886 ✈️ ✈️]]. Passengers who receive notification of a cancellation more than 14 days ahead of departure are not entitled to compensation under the law, though they are still entitled to a full refund or rebooking [[✈️ ✈️ +1-855-838-4886 ✈️ ✈️]]. If a cancellation is announced between 7 and 14 days prior to departure, and the alternative flight's timing meets specific criteria (departing no more than two hours earlier and arriving no more than four hours later), compensation may not be owed [[✈️ ✈️ +1-855-838-4886 ✈️ ✈️]].
